Black History Month-The EDI Team will be working with Niall McNulty from Valued Voices along with Simon Clarkson and the Heritage Group on a long-term project to celebrate the Black and Brown players who have played for the Blues. In telling their stories we want to create an archive that highlights the historical contribution, ongoing cultural impact and modern leadership on and off the pitch that these players brought to the club and the community. As well as record their best memories of playing for the club and being part of the city.

We aim to kick start this project during Black History Month, but we have been collecting stories and interviewing past and current players to include in the archives, and we will continue to do so throughout the coming year. As well as the player stories, we will also be asking fellow team members, and the fans for their recollections of the Black and Brown players who have turned up for The Blues, more information to follow.....
